In Memoriam

GUY E. ROWE

Principal

I cannot say, and I will not say
That he is dead. He is just away.
With a cheery smile, and a wave of the hand,
He has wandered into an unknown land
And left us dreaming how very fair
It needs must be, since he lingers there.
And you, oh, who the wildest yearn
For an old-time step, and the glad return,
Think of him faring on, as dear
In the love of There as the love of Here.
Think of him still as the same. I say,
He is not dead — he is just away.

— JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY

DRAMATIC CLUB

The Dramatic Club offers high school students participation in general dramatics as well as Junior and Senior class plays. La Mascara pins and letters are presented each year to the seniors who have earned 25 points. Those receiving pins this year are: E. Bedard, L. Moriarty, G. Holden, J. Billings, P. Nevers, S. Newcomb, T. Zanoni.

AN OVERWORKED ELOCUTIONIST

Once there was a little boy whose name was Robert Reese;
And every Friday afternoon he had to speak a piece.
So many poems thus he learned, that soon he had a store
Of recitations in his head and still kept learning more.

And now this is what happened: He was called upon one week
And totally forgot the piece he was about to speak.
His brain he cudgeled. Not a word remained within his head!
And so he spoke at random, and this is what he said:

DRAMATIC CLUB

"My beautiful, my beautiful, who standest proudly by,
It was the schooner Hesperus — the breaking waves dashed high!
Why is this Forum crowded? What means this stir in Rome?
Under a spreading chestnut tree, there is no place like home!
When freedom from her mountain height cried, "Twinkle, little star,"
Shoot if you must this old gray head, King Henry of Navarre!
Roll on, thou deep and dark blue castled crag of Drachenfels,
My name is Norval, on the Grampian Hills, ring out, wild bells!
If you're waking, call me early, to be or not to be,
The curfew must not ring tonight! Oh, woodman, spare that tree!
Charge, Chester, charge! On, Stanley, on! and let who will be clever!
The boy stood on the burning deck, but I go on forever!"

His elocution was superb, his voice and gestures fine;
His schoolmates all applauded as he finished the last line.
"I see it doesn't matter," Robert thought "what words I say,
So long as I declaim with oratorical display."

— Carolyn Wells

THE LANGUAGE CLUB

F. & L.

The French and Latin Club was originally two clubs — the French Club and the Latin Club. These clubs were organized in 1948. In 1954 the two clubs united and became known as the F. and L., which is a social and cultural club in Norway High School.

The F. in the name of our club represents French; the L., Latin. The symbol of our club is the French yellow fleur-de-lis over the Roman turris, surmounted by the Lamp of Knowledge and the wreath of green olive leaves, signifying victory. Our colors are gold, silver, and purple. Our song, "La Marseillaise."

The Degree Team is a drill team composed of the officers of the club. It performs at the monthly meetings and at the annual F. and L. Banquet.

To be a member of the club, a student must be studying a foreign language. Club pins are received during the second year of membership.

FUTURE BUSINESS LEADERS OF AMERICA

All students who are taking the business course or a business subject are eligible to join the Future Business Leaders of America Club. The purpose is to build intelligence and understanding in the difficult choice of future occupations which will be essential in the home, business world, society and the community.

This year at our meeting we have had election of officers and initiation of the new members. For a money-making project we sell the Ram, the school paper. The purpose is to get certificates for shorthand and typing, and to help buy the Today's Secretary magazine.

FUTURE HOMEMAKERS OF AMERICA

The National Slogan this year is "Home Economics—Your New Horizon." The program for our March meeting was a development of this goal — a panel discussion with five outstanding Home Economists in various fields, participating.

Our exhibit at the Oxford County Fair depicted one phase of Home Economics—"The Dietitian." We again won the Blue Ribbon and $25.00.

The annual meeting with the Norway Woman's Club is always a highlight. This year we had charge of the hospitality at the December meeting. Special Christmas refreshments were served and we had a table of gifts for sale.

The Woman's Club was so pleased with the results of the first style show held in the spring —1960—that they are to double the prize money offered this year. Additional awards will be given by Crane's and J. J. Newberry Company. This year the style show will be held in conjunction with the May meeting of the P. T. A. Our club also participated in the Junior Vogue dressmaking contest held with the regular contest of the Woman's Club, March 21. Six girls competed; the winner was Joanne Erickson who represented the club at the State contest held at U. F. M. April 4th.

We again participated in the National Cherry Pie Baking Contest. Eight girls entered the local contest. Crystal Thomas was the winner and she competed at the State Contest held at King Junior High School, Portland, January 21, 1961.

The Betty Crocker Homemaker of Tomorrow Award was won by Sally Foster and the pin presented to her by Mr. Spear.

The winner of the Rural Electrification Contest was Linda Allen, who will represent our club at the State Contest at Orono, April 8.

The Crisco Award, given by the Proctor and Gamble Company for the outstanding Home Economics student of the year was given for 1959-1960 to Miss Linda Allen. It will again be awarded, this year, at last chapel.

We were fortunate to have Crystal Thomas attend the National F. H. A. Convention in July 1960 in Washington, D. C. She was, also, a member of the All-State Chorus at that meeting. She will be a candidate for State President at the annual meeting held in Augusta, April 29, 1961.

The club is making plans to send Linda Allen as a delegate to the National Convention to be held this year at St. Louis, Missouri, July 3 to 6.

The annual American Agricultural Foundation Award and gift book and the sterling F. H. A. pins, earned by our point system, will again be awarded at Last Chapel.

One World

One World built on a firm foundation:
Built on a firm foundation of peace.
What a wond'rous sight,
Freedom's flame a-light,

In a world where war shall cease!
One World built on love and peace.
When God smiled, bright sunlight
Flooded hills and plains;

Sing-birds filled green valleys
With their glad refrains:
All things God created,
His great Love to share.

SAFETY COUNCIL

Director, Mr. Hacker

The NHSSC was formed a year and a half ago with a membership of 25 students. For the short time we have been in operation we have achieved great heights in the way of safety. Our membership has increased almost 100% since the first meeting.

In the past we have had safety contests in both Elementary and Junior High. These programs have met with great success. Praise must go to those who in the beginning worked hard to inform the people why a safety council has been formed.

I HAD BUT FIFTY CENTS

I took my girl to a fancy ball;
It was a social hop;
We waited till the folks got out,
And the music it did stop.
Then to a restaurant we went,
The best one on the street;
She said she wasn't hungry,
But this is what she eat;
A dozen raw, a plate of slaw,
A chicken and a roast,
Some applesass, and sparagrass,
And soft-shell crabs on toast,
A big box stew, and crackers too;
Her appetite was immense!
When she called for pie,
I thought I'd die,
For I had but fifty cents.

The Norway High Rams, under freshman coach Dore; formerly All-State end at the University of Maine, started pre-season practice August 15. Coach Dore quickly took over the task of whipping the boys into a well co-ordinated team.

The Rams' most controversial games seemed to be the battles at Old Orchard and South Paris. On October 15 the Norway team went to play Old Orchard, who were, according to some sports writers, comparable to the Syracuse ball club. The Rams proved this presumption quite false as they were the first class C team to defeat the Sea Gulls in 5 years.

November 4, 22 Norway boys invaded the Paris high domain with only one thought in mind—Victory. On said date Paris fans observed their first defeat on the 5-year old Paris High Athletic Field.

Much credit should be given to the backfield consisting of powerhouses Barry Tilley, Gary Rounds; expert quarterback Joe Larson; and strong fullback Dick Heikkinen.

This rugged backfield had a very strong, dependable offensive and defensive line in front of them this year, deserving a great deal of praise with sturdy ends Jon Saleeby, Pop Alberi; hardy tackles Al Murch, Steve Hill, Bob Tikkanen; speedy guards Lew Williams and Bob Timberlake; along with the dependable centering of George Hill.

BASEBALL

The Rams, says coach Jim Beaudry, seemed to have one of those seasons when everything went wrong. Although they had a record of only three wins, there were some very outstanding players. Barry Tilley is said to have stolen more bases than anyone in the league. The two top hitters were Dick Heikkinen and Barry Tilley.

SCHOOL SONG

"The Mountains"

Amidst the silent beauty of our Oxford hills,
We have wrought our wayward fancies o'er and o'er;
Have read the lessons writ in woods and rippling rills,
And we've sought the treasures hid in wisdom's lore.

Chorus:

Oh Norway! Dear Norway! We love thy pine clad hills,
Whose beauty uplifting our hearts with rapture thrills.
And ever in friendship we're bound by memory's tie—
All loyal to our dear old Norway High.

A happy band we'll while away the busy days,
Or we'll cheer until the echoing hills reply;
And though our pathway lead through dark or sunny ways,
We will love for aye our dear old Norway High.

Oh, rugged hills, look down upon our joyous throng,
While the breezes gently sway our banners bright;
Teach us to make our pathway bright with happy song,
Ever loyal to our colors, blue and white.

HOMEWORK

My head goes round and round inside
  At the end of each school day.
Things I've learned keep flooding back,
  In a most confusing way.

There's homework by the ton, and more—
  I've studied till I'm blue!
But I've tried awful hard, I think,
  And now, at last, I'm through.

And as I put my books away,
  I whisper a glad "Amen."
Then, awful thought! Tomorrow
  I must go through all that again!

EXPLOSIVE YOUTH

There is no question about it! Today's youth are different from the young people a generation ago. Naturally, when we consider these differences, we think in terms of delinquency, or more specifically we think in terms of alcohol, dope, gang wars, and other evils too innumerable to mention. Even more recently we see the current generation passing its leisure time rioting. What is the cause for these riots in various corners of the globe, including our own southern United States? Are these young people comparable to ignorant sheep in that they can be led blindly into anything? It would not seem so, primarily because of the indisputable fact that the majority of these participants are college students, not illiterate animals, but educated people, presumably the best of their generation.

Granted, the mass demonstrations in Japan were anti-American, but this doesn't necessarily make them wrong. Merely because a fraction of the people in that country do not care to be locked in an agreement which would place them in a very precarious situation in the event of an East-West war, there is no reason to chastise and criticize them.

The problem in the United States dates back well before the Civil War. Namely, the problem in civil rights, the most pressing of which is integration. For the last few years the South has been in an almost constant storm, rising unexpectedly and then subsiding until provoked to eruption again. The most recent storm took place in Athens, Georgia, on the campus of the University of Georgia—the provoking element: the admission of two Negro students into the school. The uncontrollable protests by the white students made it unsafe for the Negroes to continue.

It is conceivable that the ends obtained do not justify the means, but these means are not without merit. The youth of today demand to be heard; they have individual ideas and feel they must express them. Perhaps they do so in a crude and barbaric way; but until they are offered more effective means, it is inevitable that these physical outbursts will continue.

DECISION AT DAWN

The dying horse groaned pitifully, and his master, dressed in the gray of a Confederate officer, laid an encouraging and comforting hand on the neck of the once proud beauty and spoke in a soft, understanding voice. Yes, it was the voice and the hands that had guided and trained the stallion, that had inspired in him the feeling that he must give his life for this creature called man if it were asked of him. But he had not always felt this way. Oh, no, he was going to jump and run with the colts over the hills and through the fields; he was going to go places civilized man had never heard of and drink from the clearest of mountain springs instead of a wooden pail, ringed with mold, and filled with the stagnant water of a nearby bog.

The stricken horse sighed deeply at the thought of his young days and managed a nicker that was barely audible above the sound of the wind in the foliage of the Virginia countryside and the far-distant sound of cannons, echoing through the inky-blackness of the night that was broken neither by the light of the moon nor the stars.

Because of the movement of the dying animal, the young officer resumed the quiet, comforting flow of words and placed gentle hands on the quivering neck of the gallant horse, struggling for every breath, yet fighting a losing battle. He fingered the rusty pistol strapped to his right hip and jerked his hand away as if the surface were white hot. Yet, the deep chest wounds, the severed tendon in the right foreleg, and the eyes, steeped in misery, pleading for peace from the never-ending throbs of pain, told the young man that, although he could not avoid the inevitable, he could prevent the further suffering of this gallant animal who had entered the war knowing only that it had been asked by the one he loved and trusted.

Without further adieu, he again reached for his pistol, grasped it with a fierceness that only love and pity can bring, raised and aimed it at the beautifully marked head of the prone animal. Wiping a tear from his eye, he cast a lingering glance at his faithful mount. Then raising his left hand to steady the gun quivering in his right hand, he squeezed the trigger. The sound of the shot echoed across the valley. The early morning sun depicted nothing of the battle that was waged in the mind of the young man. Still it was not a cheery sun, the birds did not sing, and a face of gloom was trudging up the hill with a smoking pistol clutched in his right hand.

THE RUBBER DOLL

Anne was excited as she packed for her trip to Africa where her father was to work in Kenya. There were many things which Anne had to leave behind because of the restriction of weight on the plane. She had to pick out one thing from all her toys to take on the flight. With the help of her mother, she finally decided to take the rubber doll she had received for Christmas.

Two days later the Halls boarded the plane to begin their flight. The plane flew in wonderful weather, and everything seemed normal. Everyone was in good spirits, and all were friendly to Anne and her parents. It was very exciting for Anne to see the land and later the sea beneath her, for this was her first flight.

An hour had elapsed when there was a sudden jolt; soon the pilot addressed the passengers over the speaker and told them to fasten their safety belts because the plane was going down. Anne felt a sudden sensation as the nerves tightened in her stomach. She could see the ocean coming nearer and nearer as the plane fell. Suddenly it was all over, and the plane was sinking. The crew tried to save everyone; but it was in vain, for the wind was tearing at the sea.

There were many investigations to find out what happened to the plane, crew, and passengers; but all that was found was a small rubber doll—the only thing that survived the ordeal.

LOST LOVE—REGAINED

He was young, only seventeen, when he fell in love with her; but his love grew with each passing day. She loved him with a love as deep, if not deeper, than his own. But there was something missing. Was it true love? No, both felt love as strong as the majestic ocean. Was it maturity? No, they were old enough to understand love with both its ups and downs. They knew understanding and consideration; they had wonderful plans which were carefully made; they lived each moment for each other. Although their love was still strong, they were beginning to drift apart. Slowly he was walking away, until the final night when he whispered "Goodbye" instead of "Goodnight." Just one little word ended all the hopes and plans of a lifetime. Could this be the thing that they had lived for? Could God really let them go their separate ways?

They met for a moment the following day. Their eyes met with a hope that was retained within their hearts. All the heartaches and troubles of the previous day were past; they knew they were made for each other. Something not within their grasp had made them part for a day, but something even stronger developed within that one day to bind them together for a lifetime. What was this something? No one knows, but for these two people it was the most rewarding day of their lives.

THE WILDCAT

The Wildcat that gave me all my trouble is not the furry, snarling species with dagger-like claws. No, the Wildcat I'm talking about is a mountain.

It was a perfect day for skiing. The winter air was crisp and clear, and the warm sunshine glistened on the powdery slopes.

Watching the agile, brightly clad figures weaving so gracefully to and fro down the mountainside, I gained confidence. But the next moment when a long toboggan pulled by a red-parkaed patrolman slid by carrying an injured skier, I slipped back into the lodge for my sixth cup of black coffee.

It wasn't until late afternoon that I pulled myself together enough to attempt the impossible.

Beginners are admonished to start on a novice area with proper instructions administered by a patient pro—but not so for me!

Once the gondola had begun swaying up the steep incline, my stomach began to feel just a little woozy, and a cold sweat broke out on my brow. Why, oh, why didn't I have sense enough to stay on the ground where I belonged?

Since I'd never been on skis before, I had no easy time securing them to my boots.

Closing my eyes tight, I pushed off into full flight. It wasn't bad till I opened my eyes and beheld a sharp turn and deep decline toward which I was headed.

Throwing up my arms in terror and emitting a blood-curdling shriek, I lost my balance and dived head-first into a convenient snow bank.

After struggling for what seemed like hours without gaining much except the ability to remain upright for about thirty seconds, I realized that the sun had gone down and a wind had come up.

Hardly relishing the prospect of spending the night on an abandoned ski slope, I forced myself painfully out of the harnesses; and throwing the skis over my shoulder in a not-too-professional manner, I limped up to the summit.

I found, to my dismay, that the gondolas were all snugly tucked in for the night. Spying a gentleman waxing his skis beside the hut, I hurried over to ask his aid.

He looked at me with a rather odd expression and asked casually, "Are you skiing down, walking down, or riding down?"

I replied, "I'd like to ride down."

He in turn, "Why don't you ski down?"

My answer, "I can't ski!"

I'll never forget the look on his face!

So I was a solitary passenger in a lonely little blue car which sped, I think, slightly faster than usual down the mountain.

After that experience I resolved to practice a bit on Hodges Hill before I again picked a battle with the Wildcat.

REFLECTIONS

The sweltering heat of the day is gone now. No longer does the delightfully cool water beckon. The caressing breezes sigh in the trees on shore, after their journey across the lake. The sun has long since sunk into Paugus Bay, and above Rattlesnake Island appears the evening star. The deep blue of sky and water has softened now into a purple-tinted gray. Just as the entire vacationing population was in or on the water this afternoon, so now they can be found haunting the little towns of Weirs Beach and Wolfeboro. For this is sprawling Lake Winnepesaukee preparing for a Saturday night, and I, with the roar of the powerful outboard in my ears, am cutting through the gathering darkness at a terrifying speed toward the bright lights on the far shore of the lake. That, many miles ahead of me, is Weirs Beach.

By the time my runabout has reached its destination, the twilight has faded and a glorious summer night has replaced it. In the shadow of the giant cruise ship, Mt. Washington, now dark and silent, I drift almost noiselessly through the filthy, gasoline-soaked water toward my mooring place on the half-rotten docks. After securing my boat and mounting the creaky steps to the boardwalk, I pause silently in the shadows before becoming a part of the turmoil before me. There are the streets and shops crawling with tourists and eager souvenir hunters. In the glaring light of the shop windows is a crafty cruise captain shouting, "Folks, the famous Foxy takes a moonlight cruise tonight! Only a few seats left! Hurry, folks, they're going fast!" And then there is the hapless young girl who, with the aid of her date, is struggling to free her spike heel from the boardwalk. What a shame that their stroll was interrupted!

Even though I am separated from the milling crowd by a matter of inches, I have the impression of standing on the outside, looking at the inside. It seems strange that I feel as much alone here in this frenzied civilization as in the peaceful solitude on the lake. Finally, with a silent appeal rising through the darkness to the stars, I shudder and step into the sea of people.

MEASLES

The withering and unceasing fire from the enemy splattered against the old, windowless, weather-beaten, and decaying two-story frame house. The volleys, ripping shingles from the roof and splintering clapboards on the walls, came from the rear of a decaying building about fifty feet from the house, and from behind a large limbless elm a little to the left of the building. When the firing eased and ceased momentarily, three forms appeared in the upstairs windows and peppered the positions mentioned before.

The battle continued this way all afternoon with neither side gaining a decisive advantage over the other. The three in the house would occasionally slip downstairs and out a rear window to the apple trees, but would return to the upstairs to carry on the battle.

Not being able to carry enough ammunition at one time, the two assailants could not storm the house from their positions behind the elm tree, but they often would charge the house only to retreat when their ammunition ran low.

But all good things must come to an end, they say, and this Saturday afternoon apple fight was no exception. The injuries had been slight, but the stained appearance of the clothes told of their unerring accuracy. The buildings also were changed. It looked as if they had an acute case of measles.

THE RETREAT

It is a warm, muggy August night; the dark foreboding sky forecasts a storm; and the dull, far-away heat lightning almost confirms it. On the deeply rutted, dusty, dirt road my feet trudge wearily toward the prearranged rendezvous. Each step is echoed again and again through the dark, mysterious night surrounding me. The creakings and groanings of huge, near-by trees are blended with the slow, but steady, scuffing of my feet. Slowly the pack on my back becomes harder and harder to bear.

Suddenly it appears out of the darkness, as I knew it would; its huge eyes glaring into the night. Closer and closer its four feet are churning. Blinded by the light, I rush to the side of the road, but now all attempts to escape my destiny are fruitless. Yet it will seem good to be relieved of my burden. The noise of its eight powerful arms is now audible as it slows to make its capture. Its huge jaw opens and from deep within, a paternal voice says, "Ran away again, eh, Tommy? Well, time to go home now."

HOMER

I walked into the room, and there she sat — the same way she was five whole minutes ago.

"Oh, Mommy," she said, "I just feel so lonely without Homer."

At this point I think I should explain that Homer, who had been Jenny's life-long companion, passed away last week; and Jenny hasn't been the same since. She is only four years old and has always been so happy and mischievous that it seems terrible for her to be so dejected.

She just couldn't understand that she should find another friend to take Homer's place. I had tried to explain to her that Homer would want her to be happy. However, all my efforts were fruitless.

Just then her Daddy came in, and I noticed that he was holding something behind him.

"Hi, Jenny," he said. "Look what I have for you."

Never have you heard such a squeal of delight.

"Oh Daddy! It's a doggie!"

"What are you going to name it, honey?"

"Homer, of course, just like my other doggie."

A DAY OF SPLENDID RESULTS

It was a crisp, clear, cheerful day in late February when we decided to spend the first day of vacation ice fishing on Moose Pond, a dream which had been our most envious wish while sitting in one of the many quiet, gloomy study halls of the past school term. At the break of dawn we were starting on the hike to our destination which was five miles away. After a good two hours of walking, the pond was finally in sight.

Having chiseled out the maximum number of holes apiece, we were ready to build a crackling fire which would take off the chill that was encountered during the preceding events. The sun was high in the sky now, but to our advantage its rays were working miracles for this time of the year.

The traps we were using were black at the base with some of the most noticeable red felt used for flags. When these flags were down, everything was quiet and unpredictable, but the instant one of those flags shot up everyone would run to be the first there. The sight of a three-pound pickerel fighting so vigorously in mid-air for his life is a heart-warming experience.

The wind was raw on the pond that day, although the sun was helping the situation tremendously. On the return trip home we counted twenty fish in our baskets. Staggering through snowdrifts four and even five feet thick we finally reached home.

TABBY

He sits there with the greatest dignity and lazily washes himself clean of the dust that has accumulated during his indolent nap.

Finishing his great performance of rubbing Mom's legs with the utmost affection, or rolling on the floor under everyone's feet, he polishes off his oversized meal with several huge kitty gulps and laps. Of course, if he doesn't receive his meal immediately after his performance, the act of the poor shut-out is on and only a soothing pat or his meal will secure his rumbling purr to normal.

He's a great hunter! Oftentimes, at night, while watching television, my parents will hear a sudden cry and there in the window stands "the black one" with his prey locked in his powerful jaws. After showing his great strength by shaking his captive from side to side by the mutilated neck, "His Majesty" saunters off, leaving only spatterings of blood from his prize on the window pane.

He is quite offended if, when Dad pops corn, he doesn't receive his in the den as the rest do, or if he is not let in or out exactly when he wishes.

However, his favorite prank is to amble out during a party and stand before a seated guest. The guest, of course, pats him and exclaims over his size, wishing all the time he would move. And if, by chance, the occupant leaves his chair, "His Grace" quickly takes it for himself and there he remains enjoying the party with a domineering contentment until someone removes him.

That's my self-centered pet for you!

THE FATE OF MANKIND

Man is a species of highly developed animal, who has been blessed with the highest receptive memory, which enables him to experiment with certain problems. With his reasoning power he can calculate through trial and failure the answer to his problem. Being the dominant species of animal on earth, he rules over all other beings. There are many different types of men, who vary greatly in their way of life and way of existence. There are two main classes of people in the world today. There are those who wish to dominate the world with an arbitrary government run by a chosen few, not representatives of the people. The other class is entirely different; they work for freedom of all men. The first of these groups has a system which is run entirely by a very special group. These people have no rule in the government and have to work as they are told to do. Since they cannot raise their standard of living, they become just another slave of their leader. However, the people who are governed by a representative government have the chance to advance their standards of living. They live and work in the land of freedom, where a person may work for a goal, become a businessman, a farmer, a doctor, or just a worker, who lives very well compared to the average person in the world. Unfortunately, these people do not realize that today they are fighting the biggest war in the history of man; it isn't a war of guns and bombs, but a war of economics and brains that will determine the future of all mankind. Both these classes have bombs, which, with the flick of a switch, could blow the earth and all mankind to pieces. Whether or not this will happen is unknown. Will mankind survive arbitrary rule and extinction by warfare? Perhaps it will be known in your lifetime.

When you graduate it's wonderful to have a telephone job waiting for you. You'll love the friendly new people you meet. And you'll like the excellent salary, the regular increases, the opportunities for advancement and the many additional benefits that make working for the Telephone Company so attractive to so many young people.

Telephone jobs are important ones. We have our own training program which you can enter without any previous job experience.

Why not come and see our employment interviewer soon . . . before you graduate. Ask the Guidance Counselor at your school to tell you when and where to apply.
